

September 14, 2016

Westmed leases new building at Boyce Thompson Center

By Aleesia Forni |

An architectural rendering of the planned redevelopment of the Boyce Thompson property on North Broadway in Yonkers.

Westmed Medical Group, the Purchase-based multispecialty medical practice, has signed a long-term lease for a two-floor, 20,000-square-foot building at the Boyce Thompson Center, the approximately $35 million, 85,000-square-foot mixed-use center under construction in Yonkers by Simone Development Cos.

Westmed's building is scheduled to open next March and sits on the south side of the original Boyce Thompson building. The two will be connected by a glass-covered corridor.

With the addition of Westmed, the Boyce Thompson Center is more than 70 percent leased to 11 tenants. About 25,000 square feet of medical office, retail and restaurant space remains available.

In addition to Westmed, health care tenants at the new Boyce Thompson Center include Gastroenterology of Westchester LLC, Juvanni Medspace Spa and Fresenius Medical Care. St. John's Riverside Hospital is scheduled to open a new two-level, 15,000-square-foot medical office building next January on the roughly seven-acre site at 1086 N. Broadway.

Retail and restaurant tenants include Fortina, an Italian restaurant set to open in March, The Taco Project, Family Wellness Pharmacy, Tompkins Mahopac Bank, specialty hair salon Plushblow and Ultimate Spectacle.

Joseph Simone, president of Simone Development Cos. in the Bronx, said the center will open this fall.